

I have caller id and if these banks starting calling my home, they will be surprised to find that no one ever answers their calls. There are finally no sales calls waking my children from their naps in the afternoon, nobody calling during our dinner time and nobody interrupting our lives trying to offer us something we never interested in hearing about in the first place. If I need something from my bank, I will call them. These type of calls are nothing more than an annoyance and I hope the FCC will not allow the CBA to break down what my husband and I consider to be a wonderful law.
